

Another Love for Me

By: George Zivan

(Parts sung to Irish folk song, “Danny Boy”)

My darling love, you see the leaves are falling,
The summer's passed, and winter soon will be;
I don't know love, if you can hear me calling,
But I've been praying, you'll come home to me.

So many lonely nights, I wish upon a star,
So many empty days, I spend crying alone;
It hurts so much, to not know where you are,
I don't know love, maybe you found another home.

And if I could, I'd trade away my fortune,
To bring you back, where you belong with me;
For I have nothing, nothing left to live for,
And will there ever be, another love for me?

And if I could, I'd move mountains to find you,
Search every corner, of the earth and sea;
Where can I ever find, another love so true?
And will there ever be, another love for me?
