

Open Your Mind

By: George Zivan

(Parts may be sung to, “Blowin’ In The Wind” by Bob Dylan).

How many years have you walked this earth?
Yet still, you won’t understand;
How many wars will you fight with yourself?
We are one family of man.
How many good people must suffer and die?
When will you say this must end?

It’s time, my friend, to open your mind,
It’s time to open your mind.

How many mountains of ice must melt,
Before you see the rising sea?
How many mountains of gold do you need,
That you can’t spare a meal for me?
How many good people must suffer and die
While you pretend you don’t see?

It’s time, my friend, to open your mind,
It’s time to open your mind.

How many more tears can people shed
Before all the wells run dry?
How long before justice comes to this earth?
So many are waiting in line.
And when that day comes, you can be sure,
It will be justice that money can’t buy.

It’s time, my friend, to open your mind,
It’s time to open your mind.
